A two-story section of this two-part frame farmhouse measures one bay square. The northern one-story addition measures two bays long. The entrance occupies the latter section's southern bay on the east-facing facade.

This house is lit by a variety of windows, including six over six and two over two. An interior brick chimney heats the two-story section's eastern roof slope at the north end.

Corrugated sheet metal covers the roof. Plain lapped weatherboards sheathe the walls.

A well covered by a frame box with a pulley structure stands south of the house. A small frame privy is located to the north.
